

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An apparatus and method for providing an electronic book, comprising a memory device for storing book information, an input device for inputting information regarding a user request for book information, a processing device for processing the user request for book information, wherein the processing device identifies book information to be provided to the user, and a display device for displaying the book information to the user. The processing device processes a reading termination command and at least one of identifies, records, and stores, a first location, where the presentation of the book information is terminated. A subsequent presentation of the book information to the user commences from a second location located before the first location in the book information and includes a presentation of at least a portion of the book information previously presented to the user.